

INFANT BAPTISM

AN

INVENTION OF MEN;

OR,

DR. BUSHNELL'S ARGUMENTS REVIEWED,

WITH ARTICLES ON

ORIGEN'S TESTIMONY RESPECTING THE BAPTISM OF CHILDREN, AND ON BAPTISM FOR THE DEAD.

BY

REV. IRAH CHASE, D.D.

Philadelphia:

AMERICAN BAPTIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY,
530 ARCH STREET.

CONTENTS.

I.

ORGANIC CONNECTION.

The theory of Dr. Bushnell stated in his own words, with some remarks .....	17
All the Baptist theories of religion, it is asserted, are based on the error of an extreme individualism.....	24
The child's faith wrapped up in the parent's faith, so that the child is accounted a believer from the beginning.....	25
Thus it is that infant baptism becomes an appropriate rite. It sees the child in the parent, counts him presumptively a believer and a Christian, and, with the parent, baptizes him also.....	25
Dr. Bushnell's ingenious assumption contradicts the common sense of all mankind .....	26
We would avoid two extremes.....	26
Dr. Bushnell's view of Christian nurture he thinks to be radically one with the ancient doctrine of baptism and regeneration, advanced by Christ, and accepted by the first Fathers.....	26
Our reply, confirmed by that of Professor Curtis..	29, 30
Some other demands on our credulity .....	30

II.

JEWISH PROSELYTE BAPTISM, AND THE CONVERSATION WITH NICODEMUS.

The argument stated.....	31, 32
Our objection to Mr. Wall's authorities, on this subject, in his History of Infant Baptism.....	32
The case of Izates and of the Idumeans.....	33
The statements made by De Wette, by Bengel, and by Schneckenburger.....	33, 34, 37
Baptism never administered to a proselyte's child born after the time of the proselytism.....	34
The rite performed by the harbinger of Christ, not a national but a personal concern.....	35
Christ, in his interview with Nicodemus, it is reasonable to believe, had in his mind the preaching and baptism of John, whose mission it was to make ready a people prepared for the Lord.....	37, 38
The testimony of Josephus respecting John's baptism.....	40, 41
A Rabbinic passage quoted by Schoettgen.....	41
Parallel between what our Lord said to Nicodemus and what, in giving his final commission, he said to his Apostles.....	42, 43
What kind of baptism the Apostles would think of, when they received the great commission.....	46

III.

A DEVELOPMENT SUBSEQUENT TO THE DAY OF PENTECOST.

The supposition that, on the day of Pentecost, the apostle Peter proclaimed an institute which he himself did not then even think of, but which, at a later period, was properly developed.....	49

Dr. Bushnell, in his own way, provides a scheme of development, for saving infant baptism.....	49
The passage quoted from Joel ii: 28 and 29 by the apostle Peter in Acts ii: 39, and Dr. Bushnell's commentary, with our objections.....	50-58
An admirable picture.....	58
The prophet that hath a dream.....	61

IV.

THE RECEPTION OF YOUNG CHILDREN BY OUR LORD, AND APOSTOLIC AUTHORITY.

What our Lord did, and what he did not do, on that memorable occasion.....	62
A great principle announced in the admonition, Think not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father .....	64
Difficulties pertaining to infant baptism, which do not pertain to infant circumcision.....	67, 68
The words of the apostle Paul in 1 Cor. vii: 14, instead of proving infant baptism, show that it did not exist in his time.....	69, 70
And this testimony is confirmed by Gal. iii: 26, 27...	71
The alleged inconsistency of the Baptists.....	72, 73
The three cases of household baptism: Stephanas, Lydia, and the jailor.....	74-76
The duty of searching the Scriptures.....	76
Pengilly's Scripture Guide to Baptism.....	77
Dr. Hackett's Brief Statement of the best established Results at which Biblical interpreters have arrived respecting Infant Baptism.....	77

V.

EARLY CHURCH HISTORY.

The phrase, were made disciples , in a passage quoted from Justin Martyr.....	79
Proof from John iv: 1, that the making of disciples is one thing, and the baptizing of them another...	80
Other proofs from Greek usage, especially from a treatise on baptism found among the writings of the celebrated Greek ecclesiastical Father, Basil the Great.....	81
Justin Martyr's very particular account of Christian baptism.....	81
Semisich on his life, writings, and opinions.....	83
The meaning of Irenæus in the phrase, Regenerated unto God ... ..	84, 85
Tertullian's opposition supposes, not a current practice, but only that, in his circle, what he opposed had begun to be practiced.....	85
Clear and decisive evidence referred to and briefly stated, proving that Origen should never be quoted in support of infant baptism .....	88
The argument from the Shepherd or Pastor of Her- mas.....	89-93
Inscriptions on the monuments of children. The epitaph of Zosimus.....	93, 94
A passage from a sermon of Gregory Nazianzen, when Bishop of Constantinople, recommending that, ordinarily, children be baptized at the age of about three years.....	94
The catacombs of Rome.....	95-97
Analysis and examination of the array of inscriptions presented in a volume entitled Apostolic Bap- tism .... ..	98-100

- The recent splendid French work by M. Louis Perret on the Catacombs of Rome, shedding additional light on this subject . . . . . 101-103
- Fleury and Ruinart in their historical works, and Platner, Bunsen and others in their Descriptions of Rome, mentioning certain facts which prove that the epitaph of little Zosimus cannot be earlier than in the fourth century . . . . . 103, 104
- Another passage from Gregory Nazianzen . . . . . 105
- Maitland, an English author, on the Church in the Catacombs . . . . . 106
- Bishop Kip on the Catacombs . . . . . 107
- What is disclosed by the nature of the case presented to the council over which Cyprian presided at Carthage, about the middle of the third century . . . . . 110
- Here the baptism of infants or babes makes its first appearance in ecclesiastical history . . . . . 111
- On what ground Cyprian, in his Epistle to Fidus, does not place the decision of the council, and on what ground he does place it . . . . . 111, 112
- He regarded the administration of baptism as the bestowing of salvation; and he believed that still in his time, there were new revelations, and that what was then revealed, or could be shown to be lawful and conducive to salvation, ought to supersede what has already been practiced . . . . . 113
- Proofs of his claiming to have visions and revelations. 113
- Ambrose, the renowned bishop of Milan, in the fourth century, utters the prevalent conviction of his time, thus: No one ascends into the kingdom of heaven but through the sacrament of baptism . . . . . 115
- The so-called Apostolical Constitutions. The prayers in them to be offered for the infants, whether of the church or of the catechumens, prove that infants were not supposed to have the qualifications required of those who were to be baptized. For the burden of these prayers is that the little ones may be brought to such an age and state as to receive baptism.....	116

The ambiguous injunction which the Constitutions contain for the baptism of children.....	117
Pelagius and Augustine.....	118
Neander's striking remarks on Origen's supposed reference to apostolical tradition, still more forcible when applied to Augustine.....	121
The decision of the council held at Neocæsarea in Asia Minor, about forty years before the birth of Augustine, utterly inconsistent with the existence of infant baptism.....	121, 122
Grotius in his annotations on the New Testament; Balsamo in his compendium of canons; and Zonaras.....	122
Eusebius, the ecclesiastical historian, at the council of Nice, A.D. 325, incidentally presents the important fact, that not only he, but also the other bishops assembled in that great council, had received instruction before they were baptized.....	123, 124
Walafrid Strabo's book on the Beginnings and Additions in Ecclesiastical Affairs.....	124
He, about forty years after the close of the eighth century, unhesitatingly states, that infant baptism had no existence in the primitive times, but came in afterwards; and he refers to the well-known fact that Augustine himself was not baptized when an infant, but continued long to be a catechumen.	125, 126

What is implied in the fact mentioned by Augustine himself that it was a common thing to inquire respecting a Christian's child, Is he a catechumen or a believer?.....	127
Augustine's reply to Boniface concerning the statement that the baptismal service, when applied to infants, seemed to be inconsistent with common veracity.....	128-132
Its ingenious sophistry pointed out.....	132
Other passages from Augustine himself, showing that in his time there were, in the church, persons who neither believed in nor practiced infant baptism. 133,	134
Monitory judgment respecting Augustine, pronounced by Neander.....	134

VI.

INFANT BAPTISM AND INFANT COMMUNION.

Questions of no trivial import-respecting infant baptism.....	136
Infant communion, along with it, came into use; and respecting this also similar questions might be asked.....	136
The first mention of infant communion occurs in the writings of Cyprian, the zealous advocate for the baptism of endangered children in their earliest infancy, about the middle of the third century. He teaches the necessity of being baptized from John iii: 5, and of partaking of the Lord's supper from John vi: 53.....	136, 137
Cyprian's astounding testimony respecting occurrences in his time, and in his presence, in connection with infant communion.....	38

- Nearly two hundred years later, Augustine adopts the same teaching into his system; and, among other similar declarations, he says: "Most excellently the Carthagenian Christians call baptism itself nothing else than salvation, and the sacrament of the body of Christ nothing else than life. Whence is this unless from ancient, as I think, and apostolic tradition, by which the churches of Christ hold, as a fixed fact, that without baptism and participation of the Lord's table, no one of mankind can come either to the kingdom of God or to salvation and eternal life?"..... 141
- Innocent and Gelasius, bishops of Rome, maintained the necessity of infant communion from John vi: 53..... 141, 142
- What appears from the author of a Greek work ascribed to Dionysius the Areopagite; from Pope Gregory the Great; the council of Toledo; the Emperor Charlemagne in his Laws; the Ritual at Rome; Paschasius Radbert; William De Champeaux; Hugo à St. Victor at Paris; Lanfranc, archbishop of Canterbury; and Paschal II., who was the Pope about the beginning of the twelfth century..... 142-145
- In the twelfth century, the bishop of Paris commands his presbyters not to give the elements to children in any manner; and the custom ceases in France, and elsewhere almost entirely, throughout the Roman Catholic Church..... 145, 146
- Decrees of the Council of Trent, in the sixteenth century..... 146, 147
- Reasons assigned in the Catechism of the Council of Trent, with other reasons..... 148-150

The Oriental churches still adhere to infant communion. Reply in behalf of the Greek church to the circular letter of Pope Pius IX.....	150, 151
Singular sights in the course of ages. A most remarkable result. Hope for other changes in the right direction....	151, 152
How shall the great ecclesiastical controversies be rightly terminated?.....	152
The arguments that disprove and forbid infant communion, disprove and forbid infant baptism. Of the two, infant baptism is the more pernicious.....	153
Infant baptism led to infant communion. The comparatively innocent accomplice has been convicted and condemned. Shall the principal offender be permitted to escape condemnation?.....	154, 155
Until infant baptism be abandoned, the entering wedge for a lax church membership, and for dangerous errors respecting the efficacy of baptism, and for other delusions, is in the crevice.....	156

VII.

INFANT BAPTISM AND INFANT CHURCH MEMBERSHIP

Explanation of Tit. i: 6, with Coloss. i: 2, Eph. vi: 1. The Tract Society's edition of the Bible. John xx: 27. The Latin Vulgate. Chrysostom in one of his Homilies. Coleman's Antiquities of the Church.....	157-160
Dr. Bushnell represents the membership of the infant to be analogous to the citizenship of the infant in the eye of our common law. In a strongly related sense, he says, it is, that the baptized child is a

- believer and a member of the church. Our reply. . . . . 161, 162
- Dr. Bushnell asks, What could be worse in its effect on the child's feeling than to find himself repelled from the brotherhood of God's elect?—"It gives to little children the heritage of Cain, requiring them to be driven cut from the presence of the Lord." . . . . . 162, 163
- We repel no child. Parental affection itself, united with wisdom, may deem the nursery a place more suitable for children than the Lyceum or the Town Hall. The preparatory school before the university. . . . . 163
- A passage from Eusebius in his Evangelic Demonstration. Special prayer in the so-called Apostolical Constitutions for those who were receiving Christian nurture and instruction. . . . . 164
- A tract entitled the Duty of giving Christian Instruction to Children, issued at Philadelphia, by the American Baptist Publication Society. . . . . 165-167
- In what respect infant baptism is an encroachment. . . 168
- The eloquence expended on the gathering of human parents away from their young, might have been more worthily employed. . . . . 168, 169
- Ample encouragement to labor, pray, and hope for the early conversion of our children. . . . . 170
- The analogy of circumcision does not hold. God appointed infant circumcision, not infant baptism; and the design of circumcision was very different from the design of baptism as instituted by our Lord. . . . . 172, 173
- Children are to be affectionately and carefully brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord by their parents, with the co-operation of their pastor and of others who would win them to the Saviour.....	174

Finally for the church membership of baptized children, Dr. Bushnell urges "the opinions of the church and her most qualified teachers from the apostolic era downward.".....	175
The statement of Neander. A paragraph is presented in which Neander, the accommodating theorist, says, "Baptism, the visible sign of regeneration, was to be given, at the very outset," but on the same page from which that paragraph is taken, Neander, the conscientious historian, states most explicitly, We have all reason for not deriving infant baptism from apostolic institution .....	175-178
Shall we regard the historian or the theorist? Shall we follow the Holy Scriptures or the unauthorized devices of men?.....	178
The pious and exemplary parents of Gregory Nazianzen.....	178
Calvin's adventurous assertion that children are baptized into future repentance and faith.....	179
Baxter's theory of infant baptism.....	179
The Cambridge platform and the Half-way Covenant.	179
Cotton Mather and "the way of the Anabaptists"....	180
Decline of religion. The great revival. Whitefield, Edwards, Hopkins, and others.....	180, 181
Statement in Coleman's Christian Antiquities , corroborated by Bunsen in the work on Hippolytus and his Age (about the beginning of the third century,).....	182-185
Again we request our readers to ponder the considerations which we have presented.....	185
Let baptism as it was instituted by our Lord be restored. The way is open for Christian nurture in all its amplitude and all its blessedness.....	186-188

---

It is not our Christian principles, but our failing to live up to them that is to be censured.....	188
Dr. Bushnell's volume contains much that is valuable.
A desire expressed.....	188, 189